Street Railway's Battle With Last Week's Storm Expensive.

Cars Consumed 8,000 Pounds of Extra Coal a Day.

USED A CARLOAD OF SALT

Every Line in City Was Affected by Severe Snap.

Regular Force and All Extra Men Were Employed.

The Topeka Railway company had ence during the near-bliggard weather ence during the near-blizzard weather last week to keep the traffic moving.

Despite the fact that extra thousands of pounds of coal was consumed in the effort to keep cars warm, there was effort to keep cars warm, there was scarcely a line in the city on which one or more cars were not either fromen stiff or held stationary on account MHDDLE-AGED lady, housekeeping in of drifted snow which covered the Journal, Journal, rails in places to a depth of several

The severe weather of last week

The severe weather of last week caused the company equally as great inconvenience as one storm did three years ago.

Besides the loss to the street railway company in passenger traffic, the extra expense incurred through disging away snow, spreading a carload of sait to melt the snow, and sprinkling sand to take the smooth surface off the rails, amounted to hundreds of dollars.

It required approximately 8,000 pounds of coal to maintain a temperature above the freezing point in the street cars, during the worst day of the recent storm, and the motormen who shoveled the extra load knew that they had done a day's work when their shifts had ended.

Almost the entire personnel of the street railway force was summoned to the car barns at Twelfth and Jackson streets, with the real beginning of the storm which had got a foothold to the car barns at Tweifth and Jack-son streets, with the real beginning of the storm which had got a foothold before midnight on Tuesday. Extra men were added to the barn crew and were kept busy throughout the night and all day while the blacksmith and and all day while the blacksmith and carpenter shop forces were called from their regular routine to assist in doing the small mending jobs that were necessary every minute in the day.

The regular force that operates the snow sweepers was augmented with every available man for that work, and their efforts were necessarily continuous, despite near-frozen fingers, toes and ears—If cars were to be run at all.

Fires Kept Up All Night.

During the zero weather, fires were kept in cars housed at the barns, to prevent windows bursting when a car was started on its schedule for the flay. It was explained by street railway men that many windows become so frigid in zero weather, that the glass breake with the more starting of a car. Several instances were noted in Topekn.
